DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1-6 are allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Please see the "Allowable Subject Matter" section in the previous office action dated January 9, 2007, the interview summary dated March 28, 2007, and below.

Claims 1 and 4 recite a cordless power tool comprising a plurality of electric double layer capacitors, a contact arm, a safety switch that is turned on when the contact arm is pressed, a trigger lever, and a trigger switch that is turned on when the trigger lever is pulled, wherein when a safety switch and a trigger switch are off, the plurality of electrical double layer capacitors are connected in parallel, when the safety switch is turned on, the plurality of electric double layer capacitors are connected in series, and when the safety switch and the trigger are tuned on, current is supplied from the plurality of electric double layer capacitors connected in series to the motor.

The prior art of record does not disclose the above limitations, nor would it be obvious to combine the art in such a manner. More specifically, although circuits that can switch from series to parallel (and vice versa) are known in the art, there is no prior art that contains a safety switch turned on when a contact arm is pressed and a trigger switch turned on when a trigger switch is pressed, wherein those actions (i.e. pressing the contact arm and/or trigger switch) control the connection of the capacitors in series/parallel. Furthermore, no motivation exists for combining the prior art of record in a way that would yield the resulting tool mentioned above.

Art Unit: 2838

Lastly, the Japanese publication 2002-142375 (mentioned in previous office actions), does not disclose the above limitations either. It is drawn to a device that equalizes to sets of storage batteries using a charger, not a cordless power tool having power supplied to a motor. The switches of the reference are not connected to a contact arm or trigger lever, and no motivation exists to do so. Also, it is not clear how the device would be used without the additional control of the numerous switches/diodes of Fig. 5.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
